

Doctors Urge U.S. Supreme Court to Preserve the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, Ensure Patients Can Access Lifesaving Medical Care Including Abortion

As physicians who care deeply about the health and safety of the families we serve, we urge the justices of the U.S. Supreme Court to protect lifesaving emergency care, guarantee Americans' access to all aspects of emergency medical treatment and reject radical efforts to ban abortions even in life-threatening situations. We call on the Supreme Court to uphold guaranteed access to medical care for all patients when they walk into an emergency department under the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act (EMTALA).

No patient should be denied access to emergency care, including people who need an abortion. We know firsthand how complications from pregnancy can lead very quickly to a medical crisis, requiring immediate care and treatment. These patients' complications can range from a miscarriage to heavy bleeding, from placental abruption to a stroke from severe preeclampsia – and doctors and health professionals in emergency departments must be allowed to use the full range of medical options to save these patients' lives, including abortion.

As they decide Idaho v. United States and Moyle v. United States, the Supreme Court could take away the decades-long precedent of the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, which has ensured people can get lifesaving medical care including abortion. Already, states with draconian bans against abortion effectively prevent doctors and health professionals from doing our jobs and treating people who are experiencing serious life-threatening complications.

In these states, without the protections of this national law, a woman would be denied care at an emergency department even though her organs are shutting down due to a ruptured placental membrane. Patients would be turned away from emergency departments because they have an ectopic pregnancy that endangers their lives. Doctors would be forced to wait for fetal cardiac activity to cease before they can treat a woman who is bleeding profusely from a miscarriage.

These horrifying and heartbreaking scenarios are all too real – and can be prevented, by allowing doctors and health care professionals to practice the full scope of medicine when a patient comes to our emergency departments, without political interference or the threat of prosecution.

Already, too many patients with serious pregnancy-related complications are being denied care because draconian laws banning abortion hang over the heads of hospital staff, who are turning people away at emergency departments. The case before the Supreme Court is yet another part of the extremists' strategy to ban abortion care.

Every patient is different, every pregnancy is unique and everyone experiencing a health emergency deserves to get the care they need, including an abortion. For the sake of our patients' lives, we respectfully call on our justices to uphold the full scope of the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act.
